The Silver Market.

S. F. Ballester Mar. 20.

The regular weekly awards for fine silver for the government were made at Washington yesterday. There were no bids from the Anglo-California bank or the bank of California. The officers of the last named bank think they can do better by shipping direct to Hamburg, as they get the benefit of the exchange, and thus have funds to draw against. The Nevada bank had a bid at Washington yesterday, but it was rejected. The decline was the result of a sharp decline in the London market yesterday, the bank's offer to sell being based on the quotation for the previous day. Again we would call the attention of the Washington authorities to the advisability of changing the award day to some other day of the week, for the reason that Wednesday is the time when Council bills are awarded in London, which often results in a radical change in that market, to the detriment of proposals from San Francisco, as the London quotation for Wednesday comes through at too late an hour to be available. But for the drop in the London market yesterday, it is probable that all the offers from San Francisco would have been accepted. The press quotation for fine silver in London yesterday was 49d, a decline of one-eighth from the previous day. The Anglo-California bank had a cable of 48 1/2 d. This is within 2 1/2 d of the lowest figure at which fine silver has been sold in at least fifty years. It was July, 1876, that the price dropped to 46 1/2 d. Subsequently it rose to 66d. When it was about 51 1/2 d, certain capitalists of Europe, anticipating that there was money in it, bought largely and stored the bullion in the bank of France, receiving heavy advances on the same at 1 per cent. per annum. The speculation did not turn out altogether as they expected it would, and as a result they have been withdrawing their bullion and selling it for what they could get. Late mail dates show that at least 15,000,000 francs, equal to $3,000,000 in fine silver has been thus withdrawn for sale, entailing heavy losses upon the speculators. The course of the silver market has been a puzzle to American as well as European speculators. No one expected that such a long period of depression would prevail. The advocates of the standard dollar, a little over a year ago, were quite sure that the depression in silver was due, among other causes, to the demonetization of the 412 1/2 grain dollar by congress in February, 1873. Restore that coin, said they, and silver will take its old place alongside with gold. Congress listened to the arguments, and authorized the restoration. The law went into effect on the 28th of February, 1873, and the new penny mint started its process on the new coin about the middle of March. The presses of the Pacific coast mints began to revolve on the same errand on the 17th of April. The out-turn for the year has been as follows:

Philadelphia Mint	$12,919,000
San Francisco Mint	11,774,000
Carson Mint	2,683,000

When the law went into effect, the price of fine silver in London was 55d. The standard dollar has not made all things lively. It has simply furnished a market for about 20,000,000 ounces fine silver at better prices than would have probably ruled if no such absorption of bar silver had taken place. In that respect the standard dollar has been a success; and American producers have reaped some temporary benefit from the operation of the law. But there have been no other gains. The people have not taken kindly to the new coin. Costly vaults have been constructed at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Carson for the storage of standard dollars, and a considerable portion of the new vault-room is already appropriated in that way. A few small orders are being filled for distant points. Yesterday $81,000 went out, making $308,000 this month. But the demand must necessarily be of a limited character, as wherever specie is used at all gold will be preferred in sums of $5 and upwards.

A repeal of the silver law is being agitated in many quarters. Even those most ardent in advocating the demonetization of silver in the spring of 1873 are disappointed in the results. Dollars are just as hard to get as they were then. We must give 100 cents of gold valuation in labor, supplies or money in exchange for a 412 1/2 grain dollar, and after it is procured we can buy no more with it, nor pay off a greater indebtedness, than we can with a gold dollar or a greenback. There is where the shoe pinches. People with heavy obligations staring them in the face, contracted in flush times, want cheap dollars.

Wm. H. Helmen, secretary of the Wells-Fargo mining company, was arrested on the 20th, on complaint of O. H. Bogart, charged with collecting $4000 fees for transfer of mining stock, and not accounting for the same.
